LOUISVILLE, KY. (WDRB) -- 50 new jobs are coming to Louisville. Governor Steve Beshear joined Louisville Mayor Greg Fischer and others to celebrate the expansion of MD2U.

The company is an in-home medical provider for patients who are homebound or disabled and struggle leaving their home. The nearly $1.7 million investment will allow the company to expand and serve even more patients in the area.

Gov. Beshear said on Wednesday, "When it comes to expanding both the quality of life for our elderly population, this region now is leading the nation."

Services offered to patients at home are as simple a physical therapy or blood work and can be as extensive as X-rays, ultrasounds, and EKGs.
